

Healing arts virtual art gallery submissions in honor of National Cancer Survivors Day 2021

Artist

Descriptions are listed in the order shown in the virtual art gallery video on June 5, 2021.

The Gentle Dog
submitted by
Peter Shahrokh

This Gentle Dog watercolor painting was done and submitted by Peter Shahrokh. Peter was diagnosed with prostate cancer in 2016. Peter enjoys creating watercolor paintings of dogs: creatures who embody hope and care. As someone who has known cancer, he appreciates the burden of pain and loss people suffer, especially from the loss of a loved pet. Peter paints portraits of survivors passed-on companions to raise their spirits. You can see more of Peter's work at www.petershahrokh.com

Submitted by Aimee Miramontes

This sunflower piece was submitted by Aimee Miramontes; a 26-year-old survivor diagnosed with Ewing's Sarcoma in August 2019. Aimee successfully completed treatment in July 2020. Aimee's 8-year-old cousin, Olivia, was her motivation during treatment because Olivia would call Aimee to get up and paint or craft with her. This painting is Aimee's favorite that her an Olivia did together because it is a sunflower, which is the flower for sarcoma cancers.

Submitted by Danny Leonard and his granddaughter

This painting was submitted by Danny Leonard who was diagnosed with Prostate Cancer in June 2019. Danny's 12-year-old granddaughter painted this for him. It's a piece that is so positive and inspiring and personal for his whole family. A huge part of Danny's recovery has been because of the love and support of his dear family and friends. He likes to call this piece, "The bump in the road".

Artist

Descriptions are listed in the order shown in the virtual art gallery video on June 5, 2021.

Driftwood submitted
by Sarah Conning (posthumous submission)

These polished driftwood pieces were submitted by one of our Supportive Oncology social workers. The pieces were a gift to her from a patient who has since past on. When giving this gift, the patient shared that the act of polishing the driftwood was a beautiful, relaxing, and meaningful. Bringing out the inherent beauty of these pieces was an act of creation that inspires us about the human spirit and how we can cope with challenges in life.

Submitted by Heather Pica

This lovely art piece set was painted by Heather Pica during her 13 rounds of chemotherapy. Acrylic paints were used to create this beautiful abstract piece. Heather enjoys the mind body connection and physicality of spreading and smearing paints onto the canvas. The colors and flow of this piece remind Heather of looking into a natural alpine lake on a sunny day.

Submitted by Marshall Westbrook

This piece was submitted by the Westbrook family. Their 4-year-old son Marshall recently had his port removed and only has 1 week of treatment left. In celebration of the end of his treatment Marshall made some artwork using leftover medication syringes.

Artist

Descriptions are listed in the order shown in the virtual art gallery video on June 5, 2021.

Submitted by Shelli Singleton

This adorable felt bear was made by survivor Shelli Singleton while she was in the hospital receiving chemotherapy.

Contemplating Surgery
submitted by Terri Wolf

This beautiful 52x52 inch quilt was made by Terri Wolf when she was going through her experience with cancer.

Golden Opportunity
submitted by Carolyn Lewis

This piece was created in 2016 with a pastel medium by Carolyn Lewis. This painting of a Golden Retriever eyeing his owner's ice cream showed emotion. Carolyn's dear friend is going through her final round of chemotherapy and it is a very emotional time for her, and those that love her. Carolyn dedicates this painting to her dear friend.

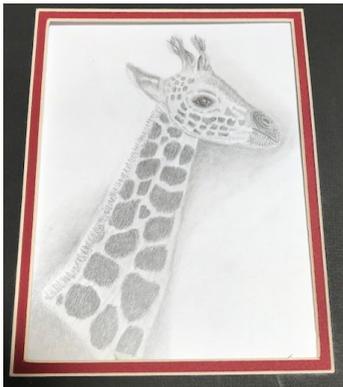

Artist

Descriptions are listed in the order shown in the virtual art gallery video on June 5, 2021.

Submitted by Betsy Sheldon

Betsy Sheldon is sharing 3 pieces of artwork she created while undergoing radiation therapy this year after being diagnosed with breast cancer in November 2020. Art is very important to Betsy as it helped her get through the treatment of radiation. Being able to join her art class virtually was very therapeutic. The shell was a project from drawing as well, using colored pencils. Betsy likes the colors and how it turned out.

Submitted by Betsy Sheldon

Betsy Sheldon is sharing 3 pieces of artwork she created while undergoing radiation therapy this year after being diagnosed with breast cancer in November 2020. Art is very important to Betsy as it helped her get through the treatment of radiation. Being able to join her art class virtually was very therapeutic. Betsy loves animals so the giraffe was especially fun to make! She liked using graphite pencils to achieve shading and different fur designs which is the focus of this piece.

Fear

Kevin Heisinger submitted these two photos that capture the beginning and end of his son Garrett's experience with cancer. The Heisinger family is eternally grateful for the UC Davis Cancer Center team that saved Garrett's life.

Hope
Submitted by Kevin Heisinger

Artist

Descriptions are listed in the order shown in the virtual art gallery video on June 5, 2021.

Submitted by Betsy Sheldon 3

Betsy Sheldon is sharing 3 pieces of artwork she created while undergoing radiation therapy this year after being diagnosed with breast cancer in November 2020. Art is very important to Betsy as it helped her get through the treatment of radiation. Being able to join her art class virtually was very therapeutic. The waves piece is watercolor. Betsy just started doing watercolor this year and found doing ocean scenes and waves to be very fulfilling (and she loves the beach).

The Bean with Santa
submitted by
Peter Shahrokh 2

This watercolor painting called, The Bean with Santa was done and submitted by Peter Shahrokh. Peter was diagnosed with prostate cancer in 2016. Peter enjoys creating watercolor paintings of dogs: creatures who embody hope and care. As someone who has known cancer, he appreciates the burden of pain and loss people suffer, especially from the loss of a loved pet. Peter paints portraits of survivors passed-on companions to raise their spirits. You can see more of Peter's work at www.petershahrokh.com

All other featured art came from Lilly Oncology on Canvas. For more than a decade, Lilly Oncology on Canvas (LOOC) has provided individuals affected by cancer an opportunity to share their stories through art and narrative. Since its founding in 2004 in partnership with the National Coalition for Cancer Survivorship and Cancer Support Community, thousands of LOOC participants have been inspired to share their experience with countless others.

<https://www.lillyoncology.com/lilly-oncology-on-canvas>