UC Davis Diversity and Inclusion Dialogue Series

The “Me Too” Movement, The Media, and Women’s Employment

When women reach a critical mass in certain professions, things change. UC Davis Emerita Professor of Law, Martha S. West discusses her view that the “Me Too” Movement became possible because women are now at least 30% of U.S. journalists. Women survivors of sexual assault are more willing to tell their stories to women journalists. In turn, what progress have women made in integrating the faculty and professional ranks of the University of California, the UC Davis Medical School? How does the presence of more women affect our educational and medical worlds?
