NEEDS ASSESSMENT

This activity will review the clinical essentials of each subspecialty in ophthalmology and offers a variety of lectures that will provide an opportunity for participants to apply what they have learnt to real-world clinical problems. Results of needs assessments indicate an education need for a succinct update on the latest developments in ophthalmology from experts in the field utilizing didactic instruction, video presentations, panel discussions and interactive roundtable sessions. This course is designed to change physician performance.

Performance will be improved by providing the practicing ophthalmologist with new tools and the most current guidelines for the management of ocular disease. Talks on managing more complex cataract surgery will provide them with new tools to utilize in those cases. Discussions about the newest available treatments for glaucoma, dry eyes, keratoconus, retinal edema and macular degeneration will also improve their ability to give patients the best options for therapy.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the end of the activity, participants should be able to:

- list the use of newer glaucoma medications and describe current recommendations for management of glaucoma, including glaucoma in pregnant women
- discuss the current recommendations for good ergonomics in the clinic and OR
- · discuss advances in retinal diseases and the use of steroids
- list the options for patients with keratoconus
- discuss the diagnosis and treatment of severe oculoplastics conditions
- discuss the diagnosis and management of juvenile idiopathic arthritis

- · describe current recommendations for uveal melanoma
- discuss how to manage complicated cataract surgery
- discuss the management of cataract patients pre-operatively and post-operatively
- discuss how electronic medical records and big data will change the practice of ophthalmology in the future
- list when particular therapies are appropriate for a particular patient, in addition to the risks and benefits of each option when treating AMD
