All health care professionals, educators, and graduate students are invited to attend a provider workshop focused on the effective assessment and diagnosis of anxiety disorders in youth with ASD. Anxiety affects youth with ASD at alarmingly high rates, yet anxiety symptoms often go dismissed, undiagnosed, and under-treated within this population. It is a mission of the MIND Institute’s Anxiety in ASD Treatment Program to enhance awareness and competence in serving youth with ASD and anxiety in local clinics, schools, and communities at-large. By attending this workshop, participants will learn practical steps to approaching the difficult task of assessing anxiety in the context of ASD, such as:

- Distinguishing core ASD symptoms from anxiety symptoms
- Navigating assessment tools and appropriate measurement selection
- Differential diagnosis of anxiety versus other disorders
