Objective

Bring awareness around how Intimate Partner Violence impacts minority groups in the United States. I will specifically talk about the Fijian Indian community and its unique barriers when it comes to seeking help for IPV.

How does IPV impact Fijian Indian Women ?

Fijian Indian Women at a higher risk for having poor health outcomes due to IPV because of:

- Colonialism
- Racism
- Minority status

Purpose

The purpose of this study was to determine how cultural views impact Fijian Indian women's perception of Intimate Partner Violence (IPV).

- The first objective of this study identifies themes in Fijian Indian women's perspective regarding IPV.
- The second objective of this study determines the impact these themes have on Fijian Indian women

Methodology

Qualitative Study

Phenomenological framework

Cross sectional

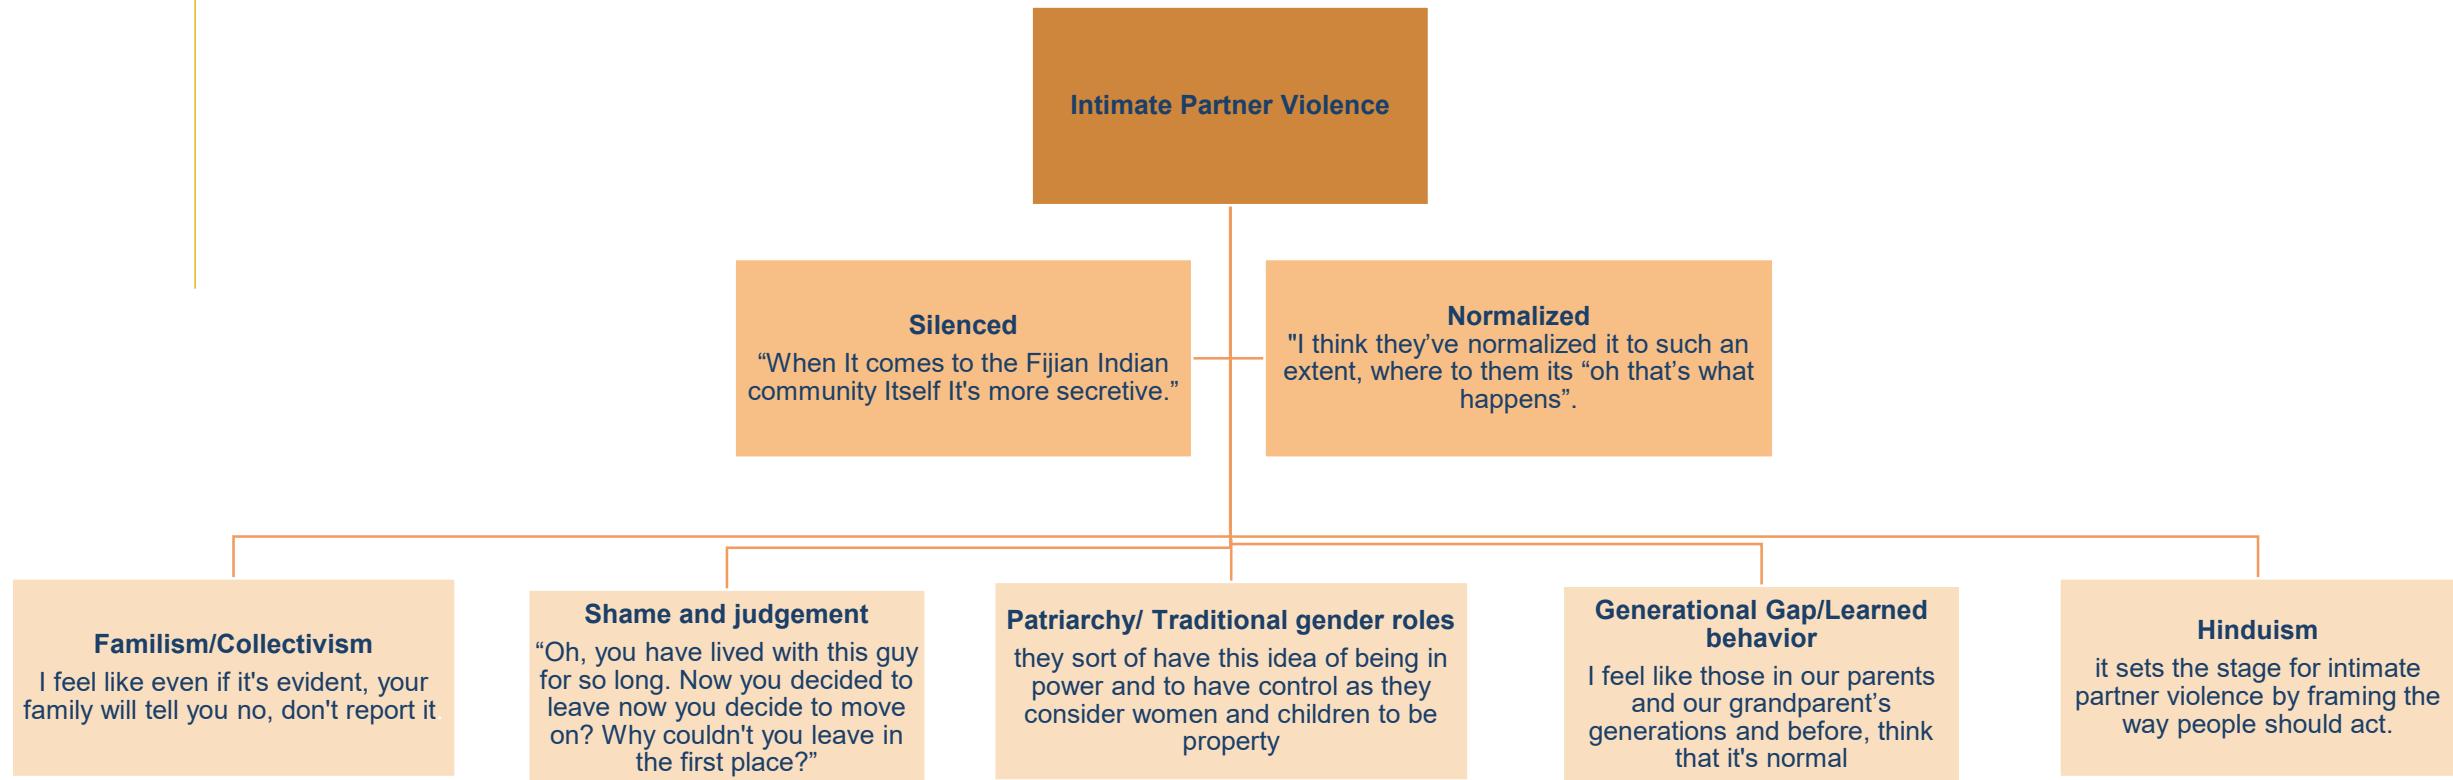

Sample size: 10 Women

Data was collected through Face-to-face interviews and participant observation

Semi structured interview with open ended questions.

Recruited on social media platforms and snowballing

Results

Discussion: What does help look like?

Establish Trust

“sometimes it takes a while for people to talk about talk about thing that are really hurting them. especially in this community we are taught “oh don’t say that, don’t say that, don’t say that.”

Provide Privacy

“they would have to be alone and in a safe setting to really um share that kind of information.”

Determine Needs

“I think I’d have to ask “is she living with that person? Is she living at home?” does that person have access to a house?”

Conclusion

Cultural factors play a significant role in determining whether women within the community seek help for IPV. Fijian Indian women often do not seek help for IPV, which leads to poor health outcomes
