Objectives:
1. Define disability and describe some of the basic common medical issues that encompass a woman with a disability, specifically understand secondary conditions like autonomic dysreflexia, and why they matter to a women's health care provider.
2. Describe what a physical barrier is and describe what physical barriers women with disabilities face at a women's health clinic.
3. Describe what an attitudinal barrier is; understand how they impact a woman with a disability's motivation to take care of their sexual and reproductive health.
4. Describe the consequences of both physical and attitudinal barriers of a women's health clinical environment
5. Understand how physicians can improve their clinic and their own knowledge to better treat women with disabilities
