Lorin Scher is an associate professor in the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences, specializing in emergency psychiatry, primary care psychiatry and neuropsychiatry. Dr. Scher serves as the director of emergency psychiatric services at UC Davis Medical Center and directs behavioral health integration services across the university's ambulatory care network and affiliates.

Since 2010, Dr. Scher has collaborated with the UC Davis ambulatory care leadership team to integrate behavioral health programs in primary care services. This team has implemented validated screening measures and a stepped-treatment model to improve patient outcomes. The stepped program includes electronic consultations, ambulatory case management services, the collaborative care model (CoCM) for common psychiatric conditions, telepsychiatry services and embedded psychiatric consultants.
