| Clinical Interests          | Dr. Hoffman is a neonatologist offering care for neonates with a variety of conditions including prematurity, congenital heart disease, and genetic conditions. She has a special clinical interest in providing family-centered care and using telehealth to provide care and support for newborns and their families throughout their hospitalization. |
| Research/Academic Interests | Dr. Hoffman's research focuses on telehealth as a method to support neonates and their families before, during, and after their hospitalization. She also has an interest in simulation and ways simulation can be used to provide training to students, trainees, and outside hospitals.                                                                |
